WHILE PSYCHO CARTER hopes to send more troops to Syria to this time, "really defeat" Isis, Turkey is planning its own invasion.

Turkey's plan is to create a 20-mile deep 'safe zone' along a 70-mile stretch of its border with Syria with the aim of preventing a Kurdish state in northern Syria; resisting Isis permeation; and blocking the quest to secure sovereign borders by the Assad government.

It should be obvious to any 5th grader that the goals of American and Turkey coincide:

Keep Isis under wraps so as to harass Assad's government, and to finally topple Assad and his legitimate administration.

First of all, US foreign policy is insane. And Turkey's is 20 times more insane.

What we have is a chaotic US/Tel Aviv foreign policy and shotgun diplomacy matched with Erdogan's double-minded and incoherent foreign policy as an outgrowth of his ultra-nationalistic domestic policies, quite often based on violence and intimidation.

Erdogan knows just two things, "Assad has to go"—Jewmerica's favorite jingle—and that no autonomous Syrian Kurdish cantons or an independent Kurdistan should exist. Moreover, he joined the US-led coalition against Isis and began bombing the Syrian Kurds in violation of Syria's borders.

Erdogan and his AKP party did not do well in the June elections. And no one, including Isis has claimed responsibility for the bombing of the peaceful People's Democratic Party (HDP) which looks favorably on the Turkish Kurds' cause.

Erdogan was unhappy with the electoral setbacks of June's elections since it thwarted his amassing powers and which saw the rise of the Peoples' Democratic Party (HDP). Hence he ordered the new election so voters could "right their mistake."

The recent snap election freed Erdogan's AKP party from the need to form a coalition to stay in power, which rode the waves of domestic terrorism and violence inside Turkey which not coincidentally arose dramatically after the June election.

Most Turks are frightened of Erdogan. The AKP now has the numbers in parliament to ratify Erdogan's invasion of Syria. And, so far, the Turkish military has been less hawkish than Erdogan, hesitant to take unilateral action against Syria without an international UNSC resolution of which Russia would doubtless vote against.

Apparently, Erdogan's posturing is more for domestic intimidation as well as shaking down Jewmerica for more support; getting more money from Germany to keep the refugees in the Turkish camps and Merkel's promise to renew EU accession talks for Turkey...(See Erdogan and Merkel on Golden Thrones)...; and bullying Russia by brandishing Turkish Stream as a stick, looking to negotiate lower prices on natural gas delivery, for which in exchange he wouldn't invade Syria.

BUT THE BEAR will not be bullied.

Russia, after a year of laying plans with the Syrian government to support Assad militarily against Isis, is in Syria to see the job through. Will Putin allow Turkey to invade Syria and establish the 20 mile long 'safe zone' in Syria's north? No.

Would Syria be justified in taking military action in self-defense against such an aggressive invasion? Yes.

Moreover, Putin has vowed many times that Russia will help secure Syria's borders and territorial integrity.

And Russia's recent announcement that more Surface-To-Air Missiles are on their way to Syria shows Jewmerica and its patsies that Russia is one step ahead of their game.

The real story is will Turkey invade Greece?

If it happens America will back the Turks especially if Putin helps Greece.

It saddens me to hear that your living situation remains critical, Br. Nat, and yet, very wealthy people still haven't come to your rescue.

I have just enough to help you continue producing articles and videos which, btw are quite informative.

Will Turkey invade Syria? I doubt it, since Russia would destroy its forces as it's currently doing to the Islamic State terrorists.

The Russians declared Syrian airspace a defacto No-Fly Zone to both NATO and Israeli warplanes last month, and they mean business. By establishing a "No-Fly Zone" over Syria, the Russians are not only protecting Assad's forces and civilians, but also Kurdish forces who are also fighting IS.

Turkey, just like other NATO countries, lacks the advanced weaponry and military equipment that the Russians possess; thus, the Turks would be suicidal to invade Syria.

The warning, "Don't mess with the Russian Bear" is no joke; and Turkey would be badly mauled if it disregarded that warning.

I still pray that some wealthy benefactor will step up to the plate and send you a considerable amount, to help you find a decent place to live.

I'm certain that there are more than enough millionaires/billionaires out there to finance your mission, as well as your monthly rent. They simply have to step up to the plate and put their money where their mouths are. I'll send you another contribution sometime next week.

Please hang in there, Br. Nat, and ask Jesus to help you continue His work by opening the hearts of millions of your readers into contributing.

God Bless you always,

Eileen

Once again, a brilliant Article, dear +BN.

What impressed me the most are all the facts showing the craziness of the Democnocratic Empire.

No one else but you tells people in effect, "Look, it's insanity upon insanity.

"You'll drive yourself nuts trying to figure out Jewmerica's shotgun foreign policy (fire a couple of shotgun rounds off, and wherever the pellets strike the target, that's our foreign policy) and Turkey's own national policies which change with the winds blowing in Erdogan's mind."

Putin is not going to blab all the Russian national security secrets, nor does he bluster like Obama and Netanyahu.

On the other hand, everything he and his administration says is straight up, morally principled, factual and truthful, and at least you know where you stand.

Whether you agree with Putin or not, you can then make your own choices standing on solid ground.

Dealing with Jewmerica, Israhell, or Turkey, or even trying to figure them out, it's like trying to avoid slipping and sliding around on ice and keeping your feet under you.

I hadn't caught the chronological relationship between the first and second Turkish elections in June and November respectively, and the now apparent increase in violence and terroristic bombings.

Now the UK Independent is asking: Was the Turkish election rigged?

The AKP [Erdogan's party] received 4.5 million extra votes compared to June's election, and people are suspicious http://www.independent.co.uk/voices/was-the-turkish-election-rigged-a6724226.html

In any case, if Russia decides to maintain a permanent military presence in Syria, which I hope they do, Erdogan ought to recall to his fevered brain that Turkey would be surrounded on three sides by Russia: Armenia to the east, Crimea to the north, and Syria on the south.

And then there was that littler matter of four Russian warships of the Caspian Flotilla that launched 26 Kalibr cruise missiles at targets in Syria.

Erdogan surely noticed that this class of missiles have a long enough range to strike the Bosporus Straits from the Caspian Sea. Just sayin'.

The picture of Erdogan and Merkel on the Golden Thrones is just hilarious. That just made my day.

God bless you, dear +BN!

Psycho Carter announced yesterday that Russia and China are going against the NWO but that 'we will not stand for it'.

This is the Jewish Cabbalist Zionist plan to form one world government. There are to be no sovereign states.

The countries around Israel must be emptied for her use. She has usurped a role that existed for the true Israel of God in the Old Testament and that was fulfilled under Joshua. That role ceased at the time of Christ never to be reinstated.

She rides on the back of a stolen dream, backed by 40,000,000 Evangelicals in the U.S.A. They made her their god through the selling of their souls and financial gifts.

Such goyim of the U.S.A. in obedience to their Jewish masters are beginning to reap the harvest this usurper has in store for their country. As well, the Zionists are using those goyim to further its plans for the Middle East and Russia in particular.

Possible bomb in a plane full of Russians. Founder of RT found dead in a hotel room. Surely they are suspicious events.

As for Turkey, its leader is under the thumb of the U.S. It seems more bloodshed for Syria, and the Kurds are intended.

The Americans will do well to be scared of the Russian Surface-to-Air Missiles.

Do they not knock out the electronics also? It appears Russia has stolen the advance in modern weaponry from a country whose planes even need far more repairs than should be necessary. Those Jewish companies do love to make business.

Yes, Brother, you are correct as usual.

I do wish some of those 40,000,000 evangelicals who have sold their souls would pay long visits to your site.

People are beginning to smell fear in the air and sadly often turn to drugs. They also would find an answer by watching your videos and reading your material.

Wake up, world out there, my country first of all!

War, what is it good for?....Absolutely nothing.

At least for we peons anyway.

Now for those pushing it, it is the grease that lubricates their wheels of greed. Agony, death, infrastructure destruction be damned.

The Italians were smart during WW2, after centuries of conflicts my feeling is they just said "screw it" and became lame militarily and hung Mussolini and his mistress. Way to go Italy, I like that type of action.

Operation Gladio? Hmmmm? The big boy pushers never give up, do they?

The downing of the Russian commercial airliner over Sinai is very troublesome as this event may be the handy work of the Zionists.

Identifying the murderers will be difficult.

Undoubtedly, the Zionists will not be denied even at the risk of Nuclear War.

Erdogen, a man of compassion, certainly exercised restraint when dealing with protesters back in 2013 in Gezi Park (just kidding).

Erdoğan was born in the Kasımpaşa neighborhood of Istanbul to which his family had moved from Rize Province.

Erdoğan said in 2003, "I'm a Georgian, my family is a Georgian family which migrated from Batumi to Rize."

However, in a 2014 televised interview on the NTV news network just before an election, in a flurry of ethnic slurs, "You wouldn't believe the things they have said about me. They have said I am Georgian...even with much uglier things, they have called me Armenian, but I am Turkish."
https://www.todayszaman.com/son-dakika_erdogan-even-worse-i-apologize-i-was-called-an-armenian_354746.html

Just never mind the fact that the allegation that he was Georgian was uttered by Erdogan himself over a decade ago.

Clearly, he did not find any ethnic identity other than Turkish healthy for his electoral fortunes a few days before the vote. And he's very cozy with the Muslim Brotherhood, which is outlawed in both Syria and Egypt.

Al Arabiya (2013): Turkey's relationship with the Muslim Brotherhood

Since the June 30 revolution in Egypt, Turkey has become the regional hub for the Muslim Brotherhood's international organization.

Istanbul has played host to many meetings planning what steps are to be taken against the military-backed Egyptian government after the July 3 ouster of President Mohammad Mursi.

These Ankara sponsored events were part of Turkey's attempt to outlaw "the foreign legitimacy" of the new Egyptian leadership, a move made in addition to its previous role as a political boot camp after the January 25 revolution.

Turkey's defense of the Muslim Brotherhood, and the tears of Recep Tayyip Erdogan when the Egyptian security forces attempted to storm the sit-in of Rabaa al-Adawiya, proved Erdogan's ties with the Muslim Brotherhood's international organization and their mutual interest in restoring "the era of Islamic rule," seen by the Brotherhood as the basis for protecting "the Islamic nation."

After the end of the Ataturk party's rule, and the start of the democratic party's era, the Brotherhood started collaborating with Necmettin Erbakan, who in 1969 founded Milli Görüş, the Turkish Muslim Brotherhood.

In 1996, Erbakan attempted to facilitate the rise of a new Islamic power, the Eight Islamic countries group, made up of Libya, Iran, Egypt, Pakistan, Indonesia, Nigeria, Bangladesh and Malaysia.

Also, the Brotherhood fielded a strong presence at the 2006 celebration of 533 years' occupying Constantinople.

Although the Turkish leadership still considers that the alliance with the Brotherhood isn't as harmful, at the national level, as ties with any other sort of Egyptian government, it still sees the rise to power of (Sunni) Islamic movements as an opportunity for the Justice and Development party to rise as a leader of modern Turkey and the post-revolutionary Arab region.

This would allow Turkey to play a dominant role in regional politics by hosting the headquarters of the Muslim Brotherhood's international organization as long as the Justice and Development party, under the leadership of Erdogan, remains in power.

Is a "moderate jihadi" more like a jackalope or a unicorn?

For that matter, "Free Syrian Army" is a generic umbrella term, and any so-called "moderate jihadist" militia can conveniently identify themselves as part of it. Then there's this little wrinkle.

Carnegie Endowment: "Though Muslim Brotherhood leaders were exiled under the late Syrian president, Hafez al-Assad, the movement is commonly assumed to be the most powerful and organized force within the Syrian opposition.

"Nearly eight months after protests began in Syria, the Brotherhood helped co-found the Syrian National Council, of which it is now the main component; the Brotherhood accounts for a quarter of the 310-member council. According to critics, this share exceeds the movement's actual size in the revolution, thanks to the numerous groups it formed in exile and its experience in political organization."

Al Monitor Syria's 'moderate jihadis' elated by Turkish election results

The Syrian opposition wants to know what kind of support it can expect from the AKP government after the AKP won solid support in the recent election.

Turkey's Justice and Development Party (AKP) elite weren't the only ones ecstatic with the party's 49% victory in the Nov. 1 elections. Some foreign elements also were captivated by the result: AKP's revival as a strong, single-party ruler that could also lead Turkey to a presidential ruling system.

Among the most pleased are the "moderate jihadis" of Syria who are fighting the regime of President Bashar al-Assad and the Islamic State (IS).

As I stressed in an Al-Monitor article Oct. 26, these groups, which are receiving support and protection from Turkey, have been going through rough times of late with Russia's intervention and high-paced joint operations with the Syrian army.

The AKP's electoral success has improved the groups' morale.

But first, an explanation is in order. From the reactions to my previous article, I understand there is a growing trend to put "moderate jihadis" in the same terror category as IS. Actually, most of the moderate jihadi groups see IS as a foreign element imposed on the Sunni world. Perhaps we should define the moderate jihadi, who has some basic differences from an IS jihadi.

Moderate jihadis say they would respect democratic election results in Syria. They recognize other religious and sectarian groups and are ready, in principle, to negotiate with them.

[That's stretching it a bit. By definition, an Islamist jihadi of whatever stripe, particularly those in the Muslim Brotherhood fold, is opposed to a secular democracy, such as Syria, Egypt, and Iraq are, or even the semi-democratic Islamic Republic of Iran.-KJ]

If a reconciliation is achieved through negotiations, they are prepared to lay down their arms in a political transition process. Instead of advocating a regional or global jihad, they limit themselves to Syria.

While the Free Syrian Army congratulated Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan on his party's success in the elections, the multifaction Army of Conquest issued a declaration noting Erdogan and the AKP government have never abandoned their support of the Syrian revolution, despite domestic and foreign pressure and have constantly followed an ethical policy.

"We are ardently awaiting the day of Assad's collapse and the building of brotherhood bridges between the people of Turkey and Syrians," the declaration said.

Khaled Khoja, chairman of the National Coalition for Syrian Revolutionary and Opposition Forces, also congratulated AKP chairman and Prime Minister Ahmet Davutoglu for the victory. "We hope it will bring stability and welfare to Turkey and to the Islamic world," Khoja said in a written statement.

The Syrian branch of the Muslim Brotherhood, in a statement released over social media, congratulated the AKP and Turkish people for their democratic struggle and thanked Turkey for standing by the Syrian people.

[In August, 2011, expatriated Syrian oppositionists formed the Syrian National Council to seek international support for the uprising. The Syrian Muslim Brotherhood officially held five seats in the Syrian National Council, the main opposition umbrella outside Syria, but created a network of alliances with other SNC members, and created a controlling influence on the Council's relief committee.

Since the formation of the National Coalition for Syrian Revolutionary and Opposition Forces in November, 2012, the Syrian National Council has taken a backseat to the Coalition, which is recognized as the external political body of oppositionists "leading" the revolution.

In 2012, Brotherhood activists created the Commission for Civilian Protection (CCP). The CCP is considered to be a front for the Brotherhood, tasked with helping armed units inside Syria connect with each other and with sponsors abroad.
(carnegieendowment.org/syriaincrisis/?fa=53518)

Its defunct website listed numerous affiliated factions, distributed across Homs, Damascus, Idlib, and elsewhere; however, most of these groups are small and generally self-identify as members of the Free Syrian Army or the Syrian Islamic Liberation Front. (Arabic):
https://web.archive.org/web/20140108140632/http://syrgccp.net/

The Syrian Muslim Brotherhood is believed to control, through funding, one-fourth to one-third of the FSA. Who knows what MB fronts have morphed into now. -Kj]

Congratulation messages from some 15 opposition groups had two joint themes: They did not forget to emphasize Erdogan's role and they believe the AKP success bodes well for stability in the region.

Moderate jihadis: Solution or problem?

According to journalist Levent Tok, who closely monitors Syria, these opposition groups believe the stagnation that prevailed between the June 7 and Nov. 1 elections has ended.

"Really, Turkey had become nonexistent in Syria for the past six months. In that period we saw the Russian military intervention. Today, Syria is effectively divided into spheres of American and Russian influence. This is why the opposition groups see Turkey as a stabilizing third-party element precisely at this time," Tok told Al-Monitor.

Tok, who noted that Syrians appreciate the AKP for taking in refugees, thinks opposition groups now feel confident that the AKP's benevolence will continue. He also said that direct references to Erdogan and personal salutations to him indicate the Syrian opposition considers Erdogan the true winner of the elections.

But are the moderate jihadis part of the problem or the solution?

Tok has an interesting response to this question: "We only speak of the combat capacity of the opposition groups. Nobody looks at their political capacity. To prevent them from moving closer to IS, it would be useful to allow them roles in the political negotiations.

"Today, [many] of these groups are trying to sign nonhostility pacts with IS. For example, many groups such as Jund al-Aqsa say that for them to fight IS, first IS must attack them. Their anger and resentment of IS and Russia are not different."

But at the end of the day, their anger toward Assad and Russia can outweigh their resentment of IS, even if they don't subscribe to the IS mindset.

Can "moderates" represent Turkey in the Syrian proxy war?

It is clear that the AKP government attaches a high priority to combating the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK) and the Democratic Union Party (PYD), as Turkey considers the latter to be the Syrian extension of the PKK. Officials made their position clear in a communique issued after a post-election security summit Nov. 4 in Ankara, convened by Erdogan and Davutoglu.

It wasn't hard to surmise Turkish Foreign Minister Feridun Sinirlioglu's top concern when he visited Erbil in Iraqi Kurdistan recently. It was his first foreign trip after the election, and he wanted to address the joint struggle of Turkey and the Kurdistan Regional Government against the PKK.

[The Barzani clan headed by Massoud Barzani, the now illegal president who's term was up in August, is in total political and "deep state" control of autonomous Kurdistan Region of Iraq is very close to Israel, and has been for decades.

The Mossad and IDF were advisors and trainers among the Iraqi Kurds, rebels who rose up against Saddam Hussein, and allies of the US-led invasion of Iraq in 2003. There are about 150,000 Kurdish Jews living in Israhell.-Kj]

Turkey will probably want to use the moderate jihadis to prevent PYD forces from crossing into Turkey west of the Euphrates River. There have been claims that these jihadis might even initiate action against the PYD on their own to gain Turkey's favor.

In short, Turkey supports a collection of moderate jihadi groups that have substantial power in Syria and whose real target is the Assad regime. The regime and Russia are hitting these groups instead of fighting IS. These groups believe that although Turkey may become more active in the struggle now that the elections are over, the United States is still confused and wavering.

Will the United States subscribe to the Russian theory that there can be no moderate jihadis, or will they continue to support these groups discreetly via Turkey? Washington is undecided.

These groups have stepped up their expectations for more support from Turkey. Ankara can guide these groups to a more dedicated war against the Assad regime despite the risk of confrontation with Russia, encourage them to fight the PYD or, by focusing on a negotiation process, encourage these groups to integrate politically with other groups.

The AKP government's choice from among these options will show us whether Ankara still wants the civil war in Syria to continue or if it has decided it is time for a political transition.

Finally, the field reality in Syria poses one key question: Should Turkey distinguish between IS violence and moderate jihadi violence?

My answer is yes. I believe this has to be done. To put both groups in the same category would be like locking up a zombie and a normal person in the same prison cell — we would end up with two zombies.

Turkey is a NATO member. What happens when Russian forces assist Syrian forces with repelling any Turkish show of force against Syrian sovereignty?

This is all a setup to bring NATO in confrontation with Russia to be followed by an all out response from the US and its supposed allies. Assassinating an archduke (and his wife) as he rides his open carriage through crowded streets and you find The Great War following thereafter.

Provoke a force-on-force confrontation as can and/or will happen along the Turkish-Syrian border and who knows what level of devastation will result.

"ISLAMIC DEMOCRACY"?

Islamic democracy refers to a political ideology that seeks to apply Islamic principles to public policy within a democratic framework. Islamic political theory specifies three basic features of an Islamic democracy: leaders must be elected by the people, subject to sharia and committed to practicing "shura", a special form of consultation practiced by Muhammad, which one can find in various hadiths, with their community.

Countries which fulfil the three basic features include Pakistan, Iran and Malaysia among others. Saudi Arabia and the UAE are examples of countries that do not adhere to the principles of Islamic democracy despite being Islamic countries, as these countries do not hold elections.

The expression of Islamic democracy is different in the Muslim majority countries, as sharia interpretations vary from country to country, and the use of sharia is more comprehensive in countries in whichsharia forms the basis for state laws.

The concepts of liberalism and democratic participation were already present in themedieval Islamic world. The Rashidun Caliphate is perceived by its proponents as an early example of a democratic state and it is claimed that the development of democracy in the Islamic world eventually came to a halt following to the Sunni–Shia split.

REPORT: ISIS HAS CRUCIFIED, TORTURED THOUSANDS OF CHRISTIANS IN IRAQ, SYRIA

by EDWIN MORA 29 Sep 2015 Washington, D.C.

Western countries are turning a blind eye to the genocide that the Islamic State (ISIS/ISIL) is committing against Christians in Iraq and Syria, reports the U.K.'s Daily Express, citing a charity group.

ISIS has already executed thousands of Christians and forced thousands more to flee ancient Christian communities in northeastern Syria and western Iraq, notes the article, adding that the jihadists demand they either covert to Islam, pay an extortionate rate/tax, or face execution, while other Christians are crucified.

"Despite concerns being raised by religious leaders including the Archbishop of Canterbury Justin Welby, the plight of Christian refugees is largely being ignored by the western world," reports Daily Express.

Dear Brother Nathanael,

I have $40 for You. On Tuesday now 11-10. How shall I send it? I won't do pay pal as I have heard terrible things.

Do you want a debit card or cash in a card? I have no credit cards. A money order from the Post Office? I usually buy visa debit cards. A cashier check from my credit union? I wish I had big money 4 YOU.

I pray for Your needs $$ almost daily as some days I forget, but not too often though.

I feel such LOVE for You.

You are gentle, kind, loving, funny, BRILLIANT, sincere, Special, Christian etc etc.

LOVE, Connie from Twin Cities Minnesota.

The SYRIAN ARAB ARMY (SAA) has broken ISIS' 3 year siege of Kuwayris Airbase in Aleppo Countryside, east of the city of Aleppo.

Ground troops secured the land approach to the south east entrance I think it was, and food, supplies, weapons, reinforcements and troop relief are pouring in.

As soon as the airbase is fully secured, roads to the airbase fully under Syrian control, and defensive perimeters set up, I expect a move up of the SAAF and RFAF soon.

This would be a strategic point for pushing east towards Raqqa, ISIS' "capital" deeper into ISIS controlled territory and where all roads in Syria converge. It is also a strategic spot for opening another front driving north and northwest towards the Turkish border into FSA/al Nusra held territory, cordoning off FSA controlled half of Aleppo and cutting off supply lines from Turkey.

Russian planes struck targets belonging to Nusra Front including a command center in Zarbe, a training camp near Kuwayris east of Aleppo and a "large munitions stockpile" near Maheen in Homs province.

The RUSSIAN FEDERATION AIR FORCE (RFAF) bombed the ISIL group's stronghold Raqqa, where two more munitions stockpiles were "completely destroyed."

The RFAF continues to hit targets in the western Syrian highlands building up their cordon sanitaire.

The enemy is very unhappy, and struck Latakia city with 22 civilians killed and 53 others injured today. They also struck Damascus with mortar fire into several neighborhoods with so far 1 civilian dead and 5 others injured.

Among other RFAF targets was a position used by Nusra Front for launching mortar attacks in Latakia and a stockpile of rockets in the mountains near Damascus kept by the ISIL group, a priority since it posed a major threat to the Russian bases.

The Russian Ministry of Defense (MOD) also stated:

"The Russian Ministry of Defense confirms significant changes in the tactics of the terrorists all over the territory of the Syrian Arab Republic.

Illegal armed groups are acting not as impudently as they did a month ago. Today terrorists are trying to conduct maneuverable defensive hiding from the strikes of the Syrian governmental troops and the Russian aviation.

The routes of delivery of armament are constantly changing. The deliveries are carried out mainly at night with observation of all elements of camouflaging."

IN OTHER WORDS...the FSA/al Qaeda/ISIS tafiri militias are running around like cornered rats!

Pray for Orthodox Christian Russia! Pray for Dr Bashar al-Assad who PROTECTS Christians!

"It's official!

The Syrian Army backed by Hizbollah and the National Defense Force militias have struck a lethal blow at the American-supported ISIS terrorists and their confederates in Nusra/Alqaeda.

This is major news. It sets the American and British terrorist enablers back a century and delivers a knockout blow to their aspirations for regime change.

My source in Latakia is in touch with soldiers inside the air base. He says the jubilation is electric.

Soldiers who were injured in the two year siege are now receiving the best medical treatment.

Food, drink, ammunition, medicine have poured in by the tons as soldiers both reinforce and replace existing forces inside the Kuwayris base."

Great article and it would be great if Russia was to succeed in ousting the Jews out of Syria and hopefully awaken the U.S.

How many more decades can America hold up?

SANA: President al-Assad phones commander of Kwairis Airport and leader of the force that broke the blockade on the airport

10 November- 2015

Aleppo, SANA – President Bashar al-Assad on Tuesday phoned commander of Kwairis Airport, Major General Munzer Zammam and leader of the military force that broke the blockade on the airport, Colonel Suhail al-Hassan.

President al-Assad told the airport Commander that "You have fought, withstood and you were a good example for heroism, courage and a brilliant image in the history of the Army's heroism."

The President added "Your steadfastness, for years, was good evidence on your confidence in the Syrian Arab army and its heroic soldiers and your comrades, so you were confident in the victory and confident that the siege will end sooner or later."

President al-Assad also told Colonel al-Hassan "Your strength, courage and the sacrifices of heroes who were with you were a good example on the faith of the Syrian Arab Army in defending the Homeland's soil and an example in sacrifice."

His Excellency saluted all soldiers and offered condolences on all martyrs, adding that the safety of the soldiers is the top priority of the Syrian leadership.

Al Masdar News: Cheetah Forces Lift the Three Year Long Siege of the Kuweires Military Airbase

One month ago, the Syrian Arab Army's "Cheetah Forces" (Tiger Forces branch) began their arduous journey across the Deir Hafer Plains to lift the three year long siege imposed by the Islamic State of Iraq and Al-Sham (ISIS) at the Kuweires Military Airport in the Aleppo Governorate's eastern countryside.

On Tuesday afternoon, the Cheetah Forces elite "Team 6 Brigade" – in coordination with the National Defense Forces (NDF) of Aleppo City and Kataebat Al-Ba'ath (Al-Ba'ath Battalions) – broke-through ISIS' final line of defense at the east Kuweires village and military housing in order to liberate the remaining area and lift this brutal three year long siege.

Over 300 soldiers trapped at the Kuweires Military Airport were greeted by the military personnel from the Cheetah Forces after they liberated east Kuweires village and the military housing; this jubilant event marked the conclusion of this saga.

According to a military source from the Syrian Arab Army, the total number of casualties for the Syrian Armed Forces from this Kuweires Military Airport offensive was 57 soldiers, with another 200+ wounded-in-action (WIA) – ISIS' casualties could not be verified, but it is likely much higher than the Syrian Armed Forces' death toll.

With the liberation of the Kuweires Military Airport in the Deir Hafer Plains, the Cheetah Forces will be redeployed to the northern Hama front, where they are expected to help forestall the enemy advance and recapture the territory lost to the Islamist rebels.

Al Masdar News: ISIS Mass Retreating from Several Areas in East Aleppo After the Fall of the Kuweires Airport

The liberation of the Kuweires Military Airport was not the end of the Syrian Arab Army's military operations on Tuesday; instead, they took advantage of the Islamic State of Iraq and Al-Sham's (ISIS) crumbling defenses and expanded their control over several sites inside the Deir Hafer Plains of the Aleppo Governorate's eastern countryside.

Moments after the liberation of the Kuweires Military Airport, the Syrian Arab Army's elite "Cheetah Forces" (Tiger Forces branch) – in coordination with the National Defense Forces (NDF) of Aleppo City and Kataebat Al-Ba'ath (Al-Ba'ath Battalions) – advanced to the village of Rasm 'Abboud, where they were confronted by a small contingent of fighters from ISIS that were ill-prepared for the advancing pro-government forces.

Following a brief skirmish with the ISIS terrorists at Rasm 'Abboud, the Syrian Armed Forces imposed full control over this small village located directly east of the Kuweires Military Airport; this was preceded by a mass exodus of the terrorist group's fighters from the surrounding area to their stronghold of Deir Hafer.

In addition to losing Rasm 'Abboud, ISIS also conceded the small village of 'Umm Arkileh after they lost control of Sheikh Ahmad yesterday; this has allowed the Syrian Armed Forces to position themselves at the western flank of the strategic hilltop of Tal Al-Ahmad.

With the reconquest of Syrian territory advancing at such a pace, I'm sure it has put a crimp in any megalomaniac designs that the NATO allied neo-Ottoman wannabe Sultan Erdogan has for establishing a "safe zone" which would potentially reach all the way down to Aleppo, which he has long coveted for his own.

Electronic Resistance writes that ISIS "sustained heavy casualties as a result of their multiple attacks, including a Tunisian field commander and a number of Chechen, Libyan, Saudi, Kuwaiti, and Malaysian militants in the battle for Kuweires (Kwairis,Kuwayris) Airbase."

This was the reply that ISIS received after demanding that the SAA surrender at Kuweires Airbase after a weekend of violent clashes in ISIS' push to take the airbase.

"They'd fired a capsule that contained a letter addressed to the SAA beseiged at the Kuweires Airbase, demanding their full surrender of the base and their weapons, along with their commitment to repentance for their infidelity to Islam and Allah.

"For the soldiers at the Kuweires Airbase in the southeastern part of the Aleppo Governorate, they have committed to not surrendering the base to the militants to ISIS, despite being outnumbered and encircled; this has not deterred the soldiers entrenched at the base from carrying out an offensive from time-to-time."

Molon labe!

Perhaps it will be said one day that Spartans fought like the 300 Syrians of Kuweries.

See map at site for the SAA's impressive gains with the liberation of Kuweiris. They've essentially opened a wedge deep into ISIS-controlled territory breaking ISIS' defensive frontline.

"When you hear that the Russians have captured the city of Crimea, you should know that the times of the [Jewish] Messiah have started, that his steps are being heard.

And when you hear that the Russians have reached the city of Constantinople (today's Istanbul), you should put on your Shabbat clothes and don't take them off, because it means that the Messiah is about to come any minute." –The Goan of Vilna

Can anyone start making a list of these Zionists and print out pictures?

We need to have an archive of them, because I think we can find them when the time is ripe and put them all on trial.

Turkey's citizenry should step up and just citizen arrest this Erdoqueer character.

I'd love to step into a steel cage with that punk and win that match. Lol.

Little wimp would get his a kicked. Why would anyone want to be a soldier and fight for any of these crooks?
